

ABSTRACT

The invention may be broadly conceptualized as an approach in which a coffeemaker (116) receives a plurality of timer settings from a network and 5 communicates the state of the coffeemaker (116) to another network device while keeping a real-time clock (1112) synchronized and correctly set by receiving period time synchronization messages.